'Maverick' Campbell visits SJSU

By Kellie Chittenden

DAILY STAFF WRITER

Fifteen minutes before U.S. Senate candidate Tom Campbell spoke in front of about 100 students in a U.S. history and government class at San Jose State University, Jennifer Olszewski said she would most likely vote for him.

"He'll probably have my vote because I don't want to go research it," Olszewski said.

As Olszewski, a freshman majoring in math, began taking notes during Campbell's speech she turned and whispered, "Is he Republican or Democrat?"

The answer to that question might get Olszewski a passing grade on a quiz, but it won't give her any idea of where Campbell stands on the issues.

Campbell is running as a Republican, but his views on some issues are more liberal than his Democratic opponent, Dianne Feinstein.

Campbell, the underdog of this race, trails Feinstein by 17 points according to a poll of likely voters released Monday by the Public Policy Institute of California.

Campbell has been called a "maverick" Republican candidate because he has crossed the Grand Old Party lines on a number of issues including abortion and gun control.

Campbell is an abortion rights advocate and supports stricter gun control legislation while Republicans traditionally oppose abortion and favor more lenient gun control laws.

Democrat Dick Lane, a professor in the social science department at SJSU, crossed party lines and announced his endorsement of Campbell before the speech.

Lane ran against Campbell in the '96 and '98 Congressional District elections.

cynical about."

Campbell expressed his own cynicism of California's drug policy in which individuals caught with possession of an illegal drug face possible incarceration.

In an interview Sunday, Campbell said, "If your only crime is being addicted, you should get rehab instead of prison."

Campbell's policy on drug dealers is far less tolerant.

He advocates the death penal-

"Democrats voting for a Republican. Is that something?" Lane said. "He beat me, and I support him. And why? Because I got to know Tom Campbell in 1996 and '98, and I saw a man of intelligence and integrity."

Campbell began his 20-minute speech by saying that he doesn't blame the generation of young voters who are politically cynical.

"I think they're pretty much calling it right," Campbell said. "There's a lot in the system to be ty for drug peddlers who sell illegal substances to children under the age of 12.

"If the person is selling, it's a different story entirely," Campbell said in the interview. "I want to be real clear about that because selling is awful. You just, you kill somebody by selling."

Campbell's rehabilitation proposal would also extend to addicts who seek out help for

Mark Trout, a member of Family Radio in Oakland, debates religious thoughts with San Jose State University students in front of the Event Center while holding a Bible in his hand. Trout was making a speech about Christianity, but some students felt offended and complained about his point of view.

PREACHING TO A TOUGH CROWD

Onlookers skeptical of traveling 'teacher'

By Beau Dowling

DAILY STAFF WRITER

The man who was preaching by the water fountain Tuesday in front of the Event Center would prefer to remain anonymous.

The University Police Department, however, knows him as Mark Trout.

Trout has been known to preach to students at San Jose State University who are willing to listen.

When asked what his name was, Trout remained silent.

"I don't like the media," Trout said. "They print the things that aren't important and don't print the things that are. I am a teacher. If you follow my teachings, you will go to heaven. If not, you will go to hell."

Some students disagreed with Trout and his religious beliefs.

"He calls himself a teacher," self-proclaimed Christian believer Rance Bobo said.

"But in a math class, if you ask a teacher a question, they show the answer in the book. This guy not only won't answer your question, but he also won't show you where his answer is in the Bible."

When asked of his opinion of Trout, Lt. Bruce Lowe of the campus police said it's a free speech and First Amendment issue.

"Unless there is a complaint that he is bothering students, disrupting classrooms, disturbing the peace or inciting assaults, Trout has the right to be on the public campus," Lowe said.

Mother Nature, energy conservation heat up campus

By Beau Dowling

DAILY STAFF WRITER

The sweltering 98 degree heat has caused San Jose State University's Facilities Development and Operations to adjust the temperature control of the campus.

"Today was a Spare the Air day," said Dan Johnson, vice president for administration. "I rode the train here from home, and it was very crowded."

Regional authorities issue Spare the Air alerts in an effort to get the public to conserve energy, Johnson said.

People are urged not to make unnecessary trips in their automobiles, Johnson said.

SJSU has its own electrical sub-station, which generates cooled water to run through the school as part of the air-conditioned system, Johnson said.

Normally, the temperature of the water is set at 44 degrees, which causes the air to circulate through the school at about 68 degrees.

On hotter days, when more energy is used, the temperature is raised to 51 degrees, which in turn raises the circulated air to about 72 degrees.

Nelson died in 1999 from complications during gall bladder surgery at the age of 69. His work has been nationally exhibited and widely respected by San Jose State University's School of Art and Design.

The collection, which was presented by professor Tony May along with Matt and Jamie Nelson at the opening of the showcase on Sept. 12 is titled "The Last Picture Show" and includes pieces from throughout his career.

Nelson used mediums such as pastels, charcoal and soil.

His three-dimensional pictures are of mixed media and

OPPOSING VIEWS

Viagra vs. birth control?

Viagra vs. birth control? OPPOSING VIEWS

Like Viagra, contraceptives should be covered by insurance. Equality of the sexes should be the goal.

Helena D. Hong
DAILY STAFF WRITER

Women already sustain the responsibility of having to decide among 10 forms of contraception, including birth control pills, the female condom, diaphragms, sponges, Norplant, cervical cap, Depo-Provera (hormonal injection), intrauterine devices (IUD) and tubal ligation (female sterilization).

Whereas, men have just two choices: condoms or a vasectomy.

"Companies will pay for a man to enjoy sex and give him the ability to impregnate a woman but won't pay for a woman to enjoy sex and prevent a pregnancy," said Margee Bartle, representing the Nebraska Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Though a woman's sexual fear does not lie in failing to get an erection, her fear of unintended pregnancy holds greater ramifications.

For centuries women's rights and privileges have been disregarded and debated. Issues such as voting, unfair wages and pro-choice stances on abortion and birth control have each created a stir of controversy.

Legislators passed a bill almost immediately in 1998 for insurance companies to cover Viagra, a pill to help male impotence and sexual dysfunction.

Birth control pills for women were introduced in the 1960s and have never been covered by insurance plans.

That is why it is no surprise that a half-dozen state legislatures around the country, have been bombarded in recent years with bills to force state insurance companies to cover birth control pills for women.

And so the battle continues, women are expected to carry the responsibility of paying for their own contraception while men don't have to worry about their "little problem" because it's completely covered by their health plans.

A woman who is uninsured or has a health plan that does not cover contraception devices can spend close to $400 annually for birth control pills and back-up methods such as condoms and foam.

The issue of contraception vs. Viagra may sound like comparing apples to oranges. Male impotency is, after all, a diagnosed disorder that needs to be given medical attention and treated pharmaceutically.

Birth control, on the other hand, is not made to cure impotency for women. It is made to give women a choice in avoiding unwanted and unplanned pregnancies and evading abortion completely.

Birth control does, however, provide several medical benefits other than preventing unwanted pregnancies. Oral contraceptives may protect against uterine and ovarian cancer, reduce cramping, produce lighter and more regular periods and may reduce acne, according to the Feminists Women's Health Center Web site.

In 1999, the New York Times reported that during the previous 12 months, more than 30 state legislatures had introduced bills mandating coverage for birth control.

Eight states have already made them law. According to the Guttmacher Institute, covering all reversible birth control methods would cost health plans an average of $1.78 per month per insured employee.

Contraceptives reduce costs for employers down the road from unintended pregnancies, including maternity care, miscarriages, abortions, labor and delivery, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

This, in turn, will safeguard employers by keeping them fully staffed. If men can be financially reimbursed to have their sex lives enhanced, then women shouldn't have to pay out-of-pocket to deal with theirs.

It is most men's will to be freely sexual without worrying about whether or not they can perform.

Though a woman's sexual fear does not lie in failing to get an erection, her fear of unintended pregnancy holds greater ramifications.

If the anti-abortion Republican Party wins the election this upcoming term, then perhaps they should seriously consider mandating that birth control be covered under medical insurance policies.

If equality in medical insurance coverage for Viagra and contraceptives is not reached, another side effect of Viagra that I can foresee is the angry woman who refuses to sleep with the victorious man.

Helena D. Hong is a Spartan Daily Staff Writer.

Medical insurance should not pay for contraceptives. Unlike impotence, pregnancy is not a disorder.

Most people consider their sex lives to be private — something the government should not legislate or control.

Pro-choice advocates, for example, believe the government has no right to decide what a woman should do with her body.

Ironically, some of the same people now claim that the government should step in and legislate bedroom affairs, forcing health insurance companies to pay for contraceptives.

Most advocates state that it should be a woman's right to have contraceptives paid for by her health insurance company because it is cheaper than abortions or raising a child.

Another argument is that if Viagra is covered, and men's sex lives are enhanced, women should have the right to enhance their sex lives as well.

A July lawsuit, Erickson v. Bartell Drug Company, seeks to force drug companies to pay for contraceptives.

The lawsuit, which has not been decided yet, was filed by a pharmacist against her employer.

Erickson's standpoint is that it is sexual discrimination for a woman to be denied coverage.

"In order to avoid unplanned pregnancy, Ms. Erickson uses a reversible contraceptive: birth control pills (also known as oral contraceptives)," the case states. "Because prescription contraceptives are excluded by Bartell's non-union employee health plan, Ms. Erickson must pay out-of-pocket for her prescription contraceptives or risk the physical, emotional and financial costs of an unplanned pregnancy."

There is, however, a giant hole in this argument: To avoid unplanned pregnancy, Erickson chooses to use oral contraceptives.

It is her choice to use an expensive preventive measure, and it is her choice to be sexually active.

It is not the responsibility of health insurance providers to cover an individual's private, personal choices.

Many people choose to use condoms or simply abstain from sex.

These people would be helping to foot the bill for their sisters who choose to use contraceptives such as birth control pills.

Planned Parenthood's Web site states that the average cost of one year of birth control pills is $300.

If insurance companies are required by law to provide for this, the cost will be transferred from the insurance companies to the woman's employer.

It would only be a matter of time, then, until employers wouldn't want to foot the higher bills and instead would decide to cancel health insurance for their employees altogether.

I hardly think it's worth possibly losing health insurance completely, just so certain contraceptives cost less out-of-pocket.

We should also examine the message being sent to young women if contraceptive coverage were mandatory.

If health insurance companies everywhere were forced to cover the pill, for example, it would be much like endorsing one method instead of another.

This could send a message to young women that the pill is better than condoms or abstinence. Some young women might even be fooled into thinking that they are completely protected from pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases when using the pill.

Many birth control and abortion advocates whine that the government should butt out of their reproductive lives — that a woman's sex life is her own business.

However, in a July issue of the New York Times, an article reported that 13 states have required that contraceptives be included in private insurance plan prescription coverage.

If they truly felt that the government should butt out, they would find other ways, without relying on the government, to force health insurance companies pay for contraceptives.

Viagra, the miracle drug that fixed Bob Dole's sex life, is a drug used to fix a medical problem.

There is nothing medically wrong, on the other hand, with fertile women of childbearing age.

If women choose to be sexually active and use birth control, they should pay for that choice with their own money.

TALKING HEADS

Should contraceptives be covered by insurance?

"Birth control benefits the well being of everyone. Viagra is for one guy. Birth control prevents teen birth, overpopulation. It prevents teen boppers from getting pregnant."

— Sean Von Felder
senior, photography

"I think birth control should be covered because it's unfair and sexist for only Viagra to be covered. If birth control is available, pregnancies can be prevented."

— Tracy Wing
senior, pre-med

"Birth control should be covered because it prevents people from having babies who don't want babies. ... Viagra is just for personal use, and it doesn't benefit anybody by being covered."

— Jemon Johnson
junior, electrical engineering

"It prevents pregnancies. It's just a healthier thing. Birth control has been proven to prevent cancer and acne. What does Viagra do to help anybody? It just helps make babies."

— Megan Kelly
junior, art

"Neither should be covered because there are more important health issues out there."

— Chris Crosby

Dealing with friends, babies, consequences

My friend Sandy is pregnant. I can't say that I'm surprised.

Actually, had she gone through with her first two pregnancies, she'd be on her way to having her third kid at this point.

My roommate told me the news, and I had to stare into space for a moment in order for the information to register.

Then she told me that I'm not supposed to know because Sandy wants to tell me the news herself.

I guess I'll have to feign surprise.

At any rate, Sandy's going through with the pregnancy this time.

Her mom made her get the last abortion.

She had the first one when she was only 16.

She was the first in my group of friends to have sex.

In the fourth grade, we all joked that she was going to be a prostitute some day.

Well, she's no prostitute, but the other day when I asked her how many men she's slept with, she pulled out a pen and paper and began writing down name after name.

It was a long list.

Sandy's always been somewhat of a jokester.

Sometimes it's hard to take her seriously, but when I saw her about a month ago, she told me something.

We were swimming at night, and she sat on a step in the pool, staring at some point in the distance with a determined look in her eyes. She told me that if she got pregnant again, she'd keep it.

I believed her.

Then she stopped looking so serious and told me she and her boyfriend even have names picked out.

Maybe that should have been a clue.

I don't think I need to specify that Sandy is not married. She has a boyfriend, whom she's living with.

She called my friend LeAnn to tell her the news the other day.

Erin Mayes
ENOUGH SAID

LeAnn told me that she told Sandy, "You don't know what you're getting yourself into."

LeAnn had a baby with her ex-boyfriend.

She described to Sandy how she can't even take her 2-year-old out to dinner.

The kid throws a fit.

Sometimes I think about the day LeAnn's baby was born, when I went to see her in the hospital.

Her boyfriend wasn't there, but Sandy was.

LeAnn rolled her head groggily until she was looking at me.

"I got kicked out of school," she said.

"I know," I told her.

It struck me as funny and sad that she would be thinking about such a thing when she'd just had a baby.

Like I said, I really wasn't surprised when I heard Sandy was pregnant.

I can't even begin to imagine the girl raising her own child.

Sandy, with her waist-length hair and two-inch-long fingernails.

My roommate and I talked about her later that same evening.

We wondered together if Sandy would stop smoking pot and quit drinking.

I wish I could say I was positive she would take care of herself while she's pregnant, but the fact is that some time during our high school years, she changed.

She became somebody who did things that friends of mine didn't usually do. While I still love her, I'm not sure I know her as well as I once did.

I don't remember thinking about her before I fell asleep, but it was obviously somewhere in the back of my consciousness.

I fell asleep and dreamed I was pregnant.

I was like a pregnant cartoon character, with a little moveable bundle inside of my stomach.

If I tried to grab the bundle, it would move to the other side.

When I woke up, I was freaked out.

Is that how Sandy feels when she wakes up?

Does she breathe a momentary sigh of relief when she realizes it was just a dream?

Does she suck the breath back in when she realizes her dream is reality?

Sometimes I wonder if I ever really knew her at all.

Good things come in small packages

Spartan junior receiver Rashied Davis' size became an asset in football

By Marcus R. Fuller

DAILY SPORTS EDITOR

Rashied Davis looked at the cards he was dealt and thought he didn't have a shot.

As a senior at John F. Kennedy High School in Granada Hills, Calif. he wanted to try out for the varsity football team, but he felt he wasn't physically built for the game.

Standing 5-foot-8-inches tall and weighing 150 pounds, Davis didn't believe he had the ability to overcome his size disadvantage.

PROFILE

His friends also discouraged him from pursuing a career on the gridiron.

"I was too small," Davis said. "I had no faith in my size, and I was scared of failure."

Despite the immense negativity against him, he never lost hope.

Three years, one inch and 25 pounds later, Davis became the leading wide receiver for the San Jose State University football team.

"He's really a special story," said Spartan head coach Dave Baldwin. "He never played high school football. But he's a gym rat. He practices harder than he does in the game. And you saw how he's competed in two big-time games."

So far this season, Davis has made significant contributions in each of the Spartans' (2-1) first three games.

Against Nebraska he had three catches for 60 yards and a touchdown.

In the upset at Stanford, he had a career-high 133 yards and seven catches.

Last week in the home opener, Davis took it easy on the Spartans' Division I-AA opponent, Southern Utah. He only caught three passes.

But, two of them were for touchdowns.

One pass from Spartan quarterback Marcus Arroyo went for 55 yards, giving Davis a total of 96 yards for the game.

Arroyo, a junior, who began the season in a dogfight for the starting quarterback position, has found much success, largely because of his big threat deep.

The Arroyo to Davis connection may not yet be at the level as Joe Montana to Jerry Rice, but to the delight of many Spartan fans, it's developing into a fine relationship on the field.

The two have connected on long passes of 36, 44 and 55 yards this season. Davis is averaging better than 22 yards per catch.

thought he was our third receiver, but you can tell he's becoming our go-to guy," Baldwin said. "And that proves to you that the heart of the dog is bigger than the size of the dog."

Junior safety Willie Adams, who is Davis' roommate, credits much of his success this season to the high level of competition between the two in practice.

"Just having him out there makes us better," Adams said. "You have no choice but to get better or you're just going to get burnt."

His stature almost prevented him from playing a few years ago, but now Davis uses it to his advantage.

"My strength is my size," the junior history major said. "They don't expect me to be that strong, so I surprise them."

He may not match up pound for pound with 5-foot-6-inch teammate Deonce Whitaker, who can squat a team-best 635 pounds, but he's still impressive. Davis benches 325 pounds and squats 460.

Even though Davis is break-ings for SJSU, at one time a college football career didn't seem possible for the Los Angeles native.

Living in violence-laden South Central, Davis went through "a lot of things," including the death of his father, who was shot and killed when he was 8 years old.

A supporting family, however, helped to keep Davis out of trouble.

Most importantly, his sister Tracy Thompson, and mother, Judy Jamison, were there when he needed positive influence.

"They gave me the confidence when I wanted to play," Davis said.

Their guidance led him to Los Angeles Trade Tech College where he started seven games as a freshman.

The following year, Davis transferred to West Los Angeles

College and became teammates with fellow Spartan receiver Edell Sheppard.

Although Davis caught 32 passes for 562 yards for West Los Angeles last season, few schools came knocking.

The one that "stayed true," got the services of a great talent.

"Every team that I play that didn't recruit me, I use as motivation," Davis said. "I despise and want to destroy them."

One of the schools that passed on him was the University of Southern California, who will play the Spartans on Saturday at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Davis is all too familiar with the Trojans.

He grew up about a mile from the historic Coliseum.

"I think I might cry when we play SC," said Davis, who bought 25 tickets for the game. "Getting to play there is like a dream come true."

In returning home to Los Angeles on Saturday night, Davis will have a chance to prove all of his doubters wrong — showing them he made the right decision to play football.

If he looks at his cards again, he might find that his hand looks pretty darn good.

SJSU men's soccer team gets first Mountain Pacific Sports Federation victory

By Ben Aguirre Jr.

DAILY STAFF WRITER

The San Jose State University men's soccer team defeated Sacramento State University 3-0 on Sunday, winning its first Mountain Pacific Sports Federation game.

The Spartans left the West-Athletic Conference last season and joined the MPSF's Mountain Division this season.

Including non-conference games, SJSU has performed well offensively as a team.

The Spartans have outscored their opponents 16-1, and outshot them 120-40 this season.

"Even though we have gotten the shots, I'd like to see more finishing," head coach Gary St. Clair said.

The Spartans enter their first tournament of the year this week. Their opponents will be Loyola-Marymount University on Thursday and Loyola-Chicago University on Saturday.

Coach St. Clair said the tournament will be "a great challenge, and it will give us a chance to see where we're at."

The tournament will be hosted by LMU in Los Angeles.

The Spartans also have a game next Tuesday against undefeated Stanford University (5-0), ranked No. 21 in the country by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America poll.

Men No. 19 in the nation

With a record of 5-0, the SJSU men's soccer team has moved up five slots in the NSCAA poll, improving from No. 24 last week, to No. 19 in the nation.

The Spartans' current ranking is their highest since 1998, when they were positioned at No. 3.

Martinez player of the week

With seven goals and four assists this season, senior midfielder Jorge Martinez leads the Spartans offense attack.

Martinez was named the MPSF player of the week Monday after picking up three goals and an assist during the last two Spartan victories.

Martinez is currently ranked fourth in the nation in points per game with 3.6 and fifth in the nation in goals per game with 1.4.

Men's national leaders

Senior goalkeeper Chris Humphreys heads the defense with 12 saves.

In the goals against average category, Humphreys ranks No. 1 in the country.

In his 405 minutes of play he has not allowed a goal.

He has recorded four shutouts in the five games he has started this season.

Spartan offense is junior midfielder Lars Lyssand.

Lyssand is tied for third in the nation in assists per game with five.

Women to host Classic

The SJSU women's soccer team entered Tuesday's game against the University of California at Irvine with a record of 4-4.

The Spartans lost 2-1 Sunday to Washington State University.

Junior midfielder Brandy Apodaca scored her fourth goal of the season in the contest.

SJSU will be hosting the adidas Bay Area Classic this weekend at Spartan Stadium.

The Spartans will be the only unranked team in the classic.

Topping the field will be the Stanford Cardinal, ranked No. 5 in the country by the Soccer Times.

Other teams participating include No. 12 Santa Clara University and the No. 16 ranked California Golden Bears.

SJSU is scheduled to play Cal at 6 p.m. Friday and Stanford at 12 p.m. Sunday at Spartan Stadium.

USC football team loses momentum with break

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Playing a football game every two weeks isn't University of Southern California coach Paul Hackett's idea of keeping a team sharp.

The Trojans opened the season with a 29-5 victory over Penn State in the Kickoff Classic, then had a bye week. They came back to edge Colorado 17-14, then had another bye.

The time off benefitted the Trojans in one regard — they inched up the national rankings after the byes.

After beating Penn State, they moved up from 15th to 12th, then went to 11th after their first bye. Following the win over Colorado, the Trojans moved up a notch to 10th, then, after having last weekend off, found themselves ranked ninth.

USC returns to action this weekend at the Los Angeles Coliseum against San Jose State University.

Hackett referred to the Trojans' time off as "sitting on the bye table."

"You watch all the games that were going on and you look and you say to yourself, 'Goodness gracious, that should be us out there playing,'" he said Tuesday. "We didn't get a chance to do that last weekend and that certainly was a disappointment."

"I feel that the momentum we were able to build through the end of last year and into this year has been somewhat minimized because we haven't had a chance to play. This first part of the season was certainly refreshing from the injury standpoint, but once again, the question is can we get this energy going, can we get re-gear to play a solid San Jose team?"

He thinks the Trojans were able to do that after the first bye.

"I thought we were ready to play against Colorado. I was worried, but the first half, we played well," Hackett said. "We were ready emotionally as a football team."

"Can we do that again? Can we be ready to play against a team that obviously is going to come in here with the idea they can really make a name for themselves?"

San Jose State has played three games, including a 40-27 victory over defending Pacific-10 champion Stanford. The Spartans opened the season with a 49-13 loss at No. 1 Nebraska, beat Stanford the following week then routed Southern Utah 47-7 last weekend.

Hackett hopes the Trojans have improved over their first two games.

"This is about the development of our team early in the season. What I would like is for us to put together our best game to date," Hackett said, noting that the Trojans begin a string of eight Pac-10 games after playing San Jose State on Saturday.

One positive sign for the Trojans was Carson Palmer's passing performance against Colorado. The redshirt sophomore, who missed most of last season with a fractured collarbone, completed 25 of 30 for 275 yards — and had three throws dropped.

Palmer was unimpressive in this season's opener against Penn State, going 10-of-20 for just 87 yards.

Despite the quarterback's performance against Colorado, Hackett said he can't be expected to be as sharp as he would have been had he not missed most of last season.

"I think when you spend a whole year on the sideline, it takes you at least a half a year to get back in the groove," the coach said. "He worked very hard the first bye week because he was very disappointed in his performance against Penn State. I think he responded with extra work, concentration and focus."

"He obviously played well against Colorado. To complete about 80 percent of your passes — with a couple of drops — is extraordinary. That was him proving to himself that Penn State was a fluke and that this is the Carson Palmer we all believe he can be."

CAMPBELL: Senate candidate talks drugs, next generation of voters

their addictions on their own.

"I propose we provide enough funds nationwide, to provide serious, effective rehabilitation for every addict seeking it," Campbell said. "No longer should someone trying to get clean be met with a slammed door."

Joel Johnson, president of the SJSU Libertarians, attended the speech and said he supports Campbell.

"He's not your standard old, regular old-bag politician," Johnson said. "We have subtle differences on certain things like the drug issue. There, I'm a Libertarian, so I think people should be free to do what they want to do, even hurt themselves. I don't think we should be forcing people into treatment or jail anyway, unless they hurt someone."

Campbell criticized current U.S. involvement in the civil war in Colombia - a leading supplier of illegal drugs to the United States.

"We're setting the stage for your generation's Vietnam," Campbell warned students. "Let's avoid that, and instead provide that money for treatment."

The $1.3 billion the federal government recently spent to send 63 helicopters and U.S. military advisers to Colombia would be better spent on drug rehabilitation programs, Campbell said.

If elected to the Senate, Campbell said building rehabilitation facilities to implement his policy would be a priority.

There are 160,000 heroin and cocaine addicts statewide and 37,000 spots in rehabilitation programs, Campbell said.

Campbell said that as a U.S.

Senator, he would fight to give the power to local authorities to facilitate drug rehabilitation programs that would cater to their areas.

Campbell's drug policy was the focus of the speech and will remain, he said, the theme of his addresses to college campuses throughout the week at San Diego State University, California State University at Northridge and the University of Southern California.

Campbell's campaigning at college campuses across the state has been called as unconventional as his drug policy proposal.

Susan Elbert, a freshman in the class said she felt fortunate that the congressman was speaking to her class.

"I think it's neat just because I probably wouldn't go to one of their seminars," Elbert said.

Campbell said he is aware of students' lack of interest in politics.

"Sure, most politicians say they care about the next generation," Campbell said. "But if you listen carefully, they're not talking to you. They're talking past you. And that's because, in most politicians' minds, your vote doesn't count."

"Because if you don't vote in numbers large enough to sway an election, you take a back seat to big-money donors and special-interest lobbyists."

Campbell said he is not accepting contributions from political action committees, commonly referred to as PAC money, in this campaign.

A bill outlawing all political candidates from using PAC money in their campaigns is currently up for approval.

his free-standing sculptures are constructed from fiberglass and lacquer or wood.

Nelson, who was born on Jan. 22, 1930 in North Dakota, came to SJSU in 1961.

The School of Art and Design put out a flier including some quotes from Nelson.

"During this period, I committed my abilities to effective teaching rather than pursue honors and recognition within the larger context of the art community with the ensuing pressures of art politics the market place concerns that such pursuit entails," Nelson wrote.

He usually worked in private, avoiding what he described as "commercialization of the art world," according to the flier.

Nelson's works evolved from representational, to impressionistic, to abstraction and abstract expressionism.

Near the end of his life, he again incorporated figures into his art.

In the '50s and '60s he was exhibited alongside artists who had established international reputations.

He also had his work shown all over the United States, including Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Washington D.C. and Ohio.

The department flier said he "responded innovatively and with great depth to those social and artistic concerns of the last four decades of the 20th century."

More than 540 people have seen the exhibit since its opening, said Kazunori Takahashi, who works at the gallery.

HEAT: Temperatures bring discomfort to students living on campus

"If a person comes into a 72 degree building from outside, which can be at least 100 degrees, there is a considerable difference," Johnson said.

Johnson said as long as the heat continues, the changes in the temperature of circulated air will remain.

Sophomore and international business major Rudy Diaz said the heat in Joe West Hall was unbearable.

"I had to take off my shirt just to sleep," Diaz said. "There should be an air conditioning system in the dorms. It's poor service."

A press release from the Santa Clara Valley Water District urged residents and business owners to conserve energy during the heat wave to ensure that there is enough power to ship treated water to the water companies in Santa Clara County.

Delivery of water is dependent on the water district's three water treatment plants, which run on electric power.

If state officials call a stage three alert, blackouts lasting up to two hours can shut down pumps that deliver imported water, according to the press release.

Joe West Hall resident Nisha Setlur said she has had to deal with the power being shut off at random.

"There was a call from PG&E that made it mandatory to shut off the electrical power for at least an hour," Setlur said.

Johnson said changes in the electric power problem begin from within the system.

"If changes are to be made, there first must be generator and transmission improvements," Johnson said.

HIV ad stirs up heated debate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A local television station has decided not to show a controversial HIV prevention ad during the day, prompting cries of homophobia.

KGO-TV, an ABC affiliate, has refused to run the 30-second spot, which shows bare-chested models, during the Rosie O'Donnell and Oprah Winfrey afternoon talk shows.

For the last few weeks, the ad has been running during the day on local cable channels and at night on KBHK, the UPN affiliate. NBC's KRON and KTVU, the Fox affiliate, also have agreed to run the ad.

The ad, paid for by the San Francisco Department of Public Health, encourages HIV-positive men and women to practice safe sex and be honest with their partners about their status.

David Metz, KGO's director of programing services, called the ad, which features partial nudity, "eye-popping." The station has offered to run the ad after 10 p.m.

Les Pappas, president of A Better World, which created the $345,000 campaign for the health department, called the decision homophobic.

"We've done research to find out what our target audience is watching, and they're watching Rosie and Oprah. We don't want to be relegated or banished until after 10 p.m.," Pappas said.

Metz denied the charges.

"Unequivocally, that's not the case," Metz said. "We do this with every spot. Everyone gets looked at and evaluated to make sure we're treating everyone the same."

A health department spokeswoman did not return a call seeking comment Tuesday.

Mother found beheaded

DELHI, Calif. (AP) — When deputies arrived, a mother was lying on a bathroom floor, her decapitated head by her side. Her teen-age son was nearby, naked, covered in blood and reading a Bible.

Investigators on Monday were trying to piece together what allegedly led David Lange to hack off his mother's head with a meat cutter's knife.

"This is really weird because there's no history (of violence) on this guy at all," said Assistant Merced County Sheriff Henry Strength. "We have no idea why this thing happened."

Lange, an 18-year-old house painter, was being held without bail on suspicion of murdering his 50-year-old mother, Aurelia.

An autopsy conducted Monday found that Lange's mother died of multiple blunt and sharp force injuries to the head and chest consistent with stab wounds, according to a Merced County Sheriff's Department spokesman.

Delhi is a town of 7,700 people located in farmland about much light on what might have prompted the slaying Friday afternoon.

"A family member's never going to say, 'I always knew he was going to kill,'" said Sgt. Rick Marshall, who is heading the investigation.

Investigators discovered the grisly scene after one of Aurelia Lange's daughters called 911 from a nearby town and asked deputies to check on the family house on Paradise Avenue.

According to Marshall, the daughter said her mother had called to say she had fallen down stairs in the two-story home. Strength said the daughter reported that the mother said her "son was getting out of hand and that she was having arguments with him."

A crew from the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection arrived first and called deputies to say a naked man threatened them at the house, Marshall said.

When officers arrived, they peered through a sliding glass door and saw the naked man laying on the floor about 10 feet

Officers cuffed his hands and wrapped a blanket around him.

They recovered a knife near the victim that came from a kitchen butcher block.

After refusing treatment for a deep cut on a finger, Lange was placed in restraints and taken to the hospital, where he was treated and blood was drawn for drug tests.

It could be weeks before test results are complete and Strength would not comment on the possibility that Lange was under the influence of narcotics.

Merced County investigators incorrectly jumped to the conclusion that drugs drove a stranger last month to break into a Merced farmhouse and fatally stab two kids with a pitchfork, before authorities shot and killed the intruder.

"I would have given up a year's salary to tell you (the pitchfork killer) was on drugs," Strength said. "I don't even want to speculate on this guy."

At the time of the killing, Lange's father was in Texas at his father's funeral.

He returned home after his

Fate of hijacked plane unknown

MIAMI (AP) — A sea plane carrying at least 14 people was hijacked Tuesday after taking off from Cuba and went down in international waters off Key West, aviation officials said.

The fate of the people on board was not known, and it was not clear if the plane, which is able to land on water, had crashed.

"We were just told by FAA at this point that the aircraft was in the water," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Ron LaBrec in Miami.

The Russian-made Antonov AN-2 Colt went down about 80 miles southwest of Key West, Coast Guard officials said.

Coast Guard rescuers were heading to the scene.

"Apparently it was hijacked, and the pilot indicated they only had 1- hours fuel," said Lauren Gail Stover, associate director of Miami-Dade County Aviation Department.

The plane disappeared from U.S. radar shortly before 11 a.m., Stover said.

The long-range single-engine bush plane is equipped with pontoons for taking off and landing on water. It is used for passenger flights, crop-dusting and forest fire suppression.

Air traffic control in Havana notified the air traffic control center in Miami at 8:45 a.m. that an aircraft was being hijacked and was flying northwest out of Cuba, said Kathleen Bergen, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman in Atlanta.

The FAA had no voice or radar contact with the aircraft, Bergen said.
